■ Market commentary

The upcoming US leadership change heightened global economic and geopolitical uncertainty during the month. President-elect Trump's policy agenda signals a transformative approach, with key appointments hinting at tax cuts, deregulation, protectionism, and tighter immigration controls. While these policies could boost US growth and corporate earnings, they also raise inflation risks, leading to a slower pace of rate cuts from the Fed and strengthening the dollar.

Outside the US, Europe and China appear vulnerable. Tariff threats could weigh on growth, while Europe's fiscal challenges and political stagnation persist. The UK, despite being less exposed to US tariffs, faces similar high-tax, low-growth dynamics. In contrast, US economic resilience seems likely to continue.

Global equities remain on track for a second consecutive year of double-digit returns, far outpacing bonds. Gold is the only major asset class to outperform equities, gaining nearly 30% year-to-date, despite falling -3.7% in November. The 'Trump trade' drove the US equity market higher in November while most markets in Europe and Asia have drifted lower in recent weeks. US equities, driven by megacap tech stocks, rose 5.8% during the month, with the top 10 stocks in the MSCI World index all American, collectively making up 25% of its market cap. Looking ahead, a key question is whether US corporate dominance can persist amid political and economic shifts in 2025. Global emerging markets fell by -3.6% in local terms in November.

Elsewhere, bond markets returned 0.5% over the month as measured by the ICE BofA Global Broad Market index, with US Treasuries and US corporate investment grade returning 0.8% and 0.5% respectively.

Market expectations have shifted since the election, with US equities climbing, the dollar strengthening, and bond yields rising as inflation forecasts increase. Rate cuts from the Fed are now expected to be slower, with only 3-4 reductions anticipated by end-2025. As the "Trump trade" plays out, investors may adopt a wait-and-see approach heading into the new year.

While risks remain – potential policy missteps, geopolitical flare-ups, and market overvaluation in areas like crypto and megacap tech – opportunities persist. The bond market sell-off has improved fixed income valuations, and equity valuations outside the US appear attractive despite economic challenges. We remain cautiously optimistic for 2025, anticipating continued but more volatile equity market gains, driven by a broader set of sectors beyond the tech giants that have dominated in recent years.

The launch date is the start date of the portfolio. Returns before this date are back tested using the portfolio's fund holdings and published returns for these as at the date of launch date, which would not reflect Equilibrium's historic asset allocation views, or any changes, which would have been made to the portfolio's holdings over time. From the launch date, returns are based on the published returns for the portfolio's fund holdings and any changes which are made to these. All returns are calculated on a total return basis after the deduction of all fees. Returns for periods exceeding one year are annualised. All returns are quoted in US dollars, unless otherwise stated. Total investment charges (TIC) are the sum of a fund's total expense ratio (TER) and the transaction costs (TC). The portfolio's asset allocation is based on the weighted average of the underlying funds in which the portfolio invests using the latest available data. The portfolio's asset allocation may differ from time to time due to market movements, changes to the portfolio and the underlying fund data and limitations. The underlying funds will contain exposure to assets that are invested globally, which may present additional risks. The value of an investor's investment and the income arising from it will therefore be subject to exchange rate fluctuations. Foreign securities may have additional material risks, depending on the specific risks affecting that country, such as: potential constraints on liquidity and the repatriation of funds; macroeconomic risks; political risks; foreign exchange risks; tax risks; settlement risks; and potential limitations on the availability of market information. The portfolio may also invest in funds which do not permit daily dealing. Investments in such funds will only be realisable on their dealing days. It is not possible to assess the proper market price of these investments, other than on the fund's dealing days. Higher risk investments may be subject to sudden and larger falls in value in comparison to other investments. Higher risk investments include, but are not limited to, investments in smaller companies (even in developed markets), investments in emerging markets or single country debt or equity funds and investments in high yield or non-investment grade debt. Individual investor returns may differ as a result of platform and adviser fees, the actual investment date, cash flows and other transactions.
