■ Market commentary

Global markets were broadly flat in November, masking sharp intra-month volatility. Global equities returned 0.3% (MSCI World), while global government bonds gained 0.1%. The S&P 500 fell over 5% from its late-October peak before recovering by month-end, as the VIX spiked and Treasury yields swung with shifting risk sentiment.

Two key drivers dominated: Fed policy expectations and AI-related concerns. Rate-cut bets were pared early in the month amid a US government shutdown and cautious Fed commentary, then revived on weak consumer confidence and labour data, alongside speculation that Trump's Fed chair nominee, Kevin Hassett, will push for deeper cuts. Meanwhile, questions over the sustainability of the AI boom triggered sharp declines in high-valuation tech stocks. Nvidia fell 17% from its peak despite strong earnings, while CoreWeave plunged 45%. Alphabet bucked the trend, surging 14% on optimism around Gemini and custom AI chips, overtaking Microsoft in market cap. The "Big Four" now represent 19% of the MSCI World index, underscoring extreme market concentration.

Sector performance reflected these dynamics: semiconductors and defence stocks saw sharp pullbacks before partial recoveries. Crypto suffered the steepest losses, with Bitcoin down one-third, erasing YTD gains, while gold rose 6% as a safe-haven, extending its YTD rally to 61%.

Regional trends diverged. China fell 2.5% (MSCI China) on tech weakness and persistent property sector stress, marking its 28th consecutive month of home price declines. Japanese equities gained 1.4% (Topix) on stimulus hopes, though JGB yields hit record highs amid fiscal sustainability concerns. In the UK, a leak-plagued budget delivered higher spending and back-loaded tax hikes, leaving growth subdued but fiscal risks contained for now with gilts and sterling being traded in tight ranges.

While November's volatility highlights risk around AI valuations, growth prospects, and policy uncertainty, rate cuts and supportive conditions should underpin US growth and corporate earnings. Elevated valuations and market concentration call for caution, broad diversification, and tactical agility. Despite near-term volatility, we remain constructive on the medium-term outlook and see opportunities to add risk selectively during pullbacks.

The launch date is the start date of the portfolio. Returns before this date are back tested using the portfolio's fund holdings and published returns for these as at the date of launch date, which would not reflect Equilibrium's historic asset allocation views, or any changes, which would have been made to the portfolio's holdings over time. From the launch date, returns are based on the published returns for the portfolio's fund holdings and any changes which are made to these. All returns are calculated on a total return basis after the deduction of all fees. Returns for periods exceeding one year are annualised. All returns are quoted in US dollars, unless otherwise stated. Total investment charges (TIC) are the sum of a fund's total expense ratio (TER) and the transaction costs (TC). The portfolio's asset allocation is based on the weighted average of the underlying funds in which the portfolio invests using the latest available data. The portfolio's asset allocation may differ from time to time due to market movements, changes to the portfolio and the underlying fund data and limitations. The underlying funds will contain exposure to assets that are invested globally, which may present additional risks. The value of an investor's investment and the income arising from it will therefore be subject to exchange rate fluctuations. Foreign securities may have additional material risks, depending on the specific risks affecting that country, such as: potential constraints on liquidity and the repatriation of funds; macroeconomic risks; political risks; foreign exchange risks; tax risks; settlement risks; and potential limitations on the availability of market information. The portfolio may also invest in funds which do not permit daily dealing. Investments in such funds will only be realisable on their dealing days. It is not possible to assess the proper market price of these investments, other than on the fund's dealing days. Higher risk investments may be subject to sudden and larger falls in value in comparison to other investments. Higher risk investments include, but are not limited to, investments in smaller companies (even in developed markets), investments in emerging markets or single country debt or equity funds and investments in high yield or non-investment grade debt. Individual investor returns may differ as a result of platform and adviser fees, the actual investment date, cash flows and other transactions.
