■ Market commentary

The Iran war remained the dominant influence on global markets during the second quarter of 2026, with investor sentiment swinging repeatedly between fears of further escalation and hopes for a negotiated settlement. Elevated oil prices throughout April and May pushed global inflation expectations higher and prompted markets to reassess the likely path of interest rates. Strong US economic data, especially labour market indicators, combined with more hawkish-than-expected commentary from new Federal Reserve (Fed) Chair Kevin Warsh, reinforced expectations that the next US policy move could be an interest rate hike rather than a cut.

Despite these challenges, global equity markets have demonstrated notable resilience so far this year. The initial sell-off following the onset of the Iran conflict was rapidly reversed, largely due to exceptionally strong US earnings growth and broad-based upward revisions to profit expectations. Positive earnings surprises have been substantial and widespread: the median US company delivered a positive earnings surprise of around 6% in the first quarter – a level comparable in magnitude only to the post-COVID recovery phase. Given that already elevated expectations typically make such surprises harder to achieve, this underscores the strength of the current US earnings cycle. Moreover, corporate profit growth is expected to be robust worldwide in 2026-27, not just in the US.

In contrast, global bond markets continue to face structural headwinds. Rising inflation, elevated fiscal deficits, high issuance levels and significant US refinancing risks, with a large portion of debt maturing soon, are contributing to persistently high bond yields. Those higher yields in turn weighed on gold and other precious metals during the quarter.

Importantly, the relationship between equities and bonds has evolved. Rising bond yields are increasingly constraining equity valuations, with thresholds such as US 10-year yields above 4.5% historically associated with multiple compression. As a result, equity markets are becoming more sensitive to interest rate expectations.

Despite a supportive fundamental environment, there are still risks in markets. Equity valuations, particularly in the US, remain elevated, and the sustainability of returns is increasingly dependent on interest rate dynamics. This is an environment in which one should remain broadly invested in our view, given attractive yields on offer, but investors should be prepared for bouts of volatility and keep an eye out for signs of sticky inflation and speculative behaviour in the tech space.

The launch date is the start date of the portfolio. Returns before this date are back tested using the portfolio's fund holdings and published returns for these as at the date of launch date, which would not reflect Equilibrium's historic asset allocation views, or any changes, which would have been made to the portfolio's holdings over time. From the launch date, returns are based on the published returns for the portfolio's fund holdings and any changes which are made to these. All returns are calculated on a total return basis after the deduction of all fees. Returns for periods exceeding one year are annualised. All returns are quoted in US dollars, unless otherwise stated. Total investment charges (TIC) are the sum of a fund's total expense ratio (TER) and the transaction costs (TC). The portfolio's TIC is an estimated total for the portfolio based on the weighted average of the underlying funds in which the portfolio invests using the latest available data. If a TIC is not available, we may use the TER, which is the TIC excluding transaction costs. Where neither a TIC nor a TER is available, we may use the investment manager's ongoing fee.

The portfolio's asset allocation is based on the weighted average of the underlying funds in which the portfolio invests using the latest available data. The portfolio's asset allocation may differ from time to time due to market movements, changes to the portfolio and the underlying fund data and limitations. The underlying funds will contain exposure to assets that are invested globally, which may present additional risks. The value of an investor's investment and the income arising from it will therefore be subject to exchange rate fluctuations. Foreign securities may have additional material risks, depending on the specific risks affecting that country, such as: potential constraints on liquidity and the repatriation of funds; macroeconomic risks; political risks; foreign exchange risks; tax risks; settlement risks; and potential limitations on the availability of market information. The portfolio may also invest in funds which do not permit daily dealing. Investments in such funds will only be realisable on their dealing days. It is not possible to assess the proper market price of these investments, other than on the fund's dealing days. Higher risk investments may be subject to sudden and larger falls in value in comparison to other investments. Higher risk investments include, but are not limited to, investments in smaller companies (even in developed markets), investments in emerging markets or single country debt or equity funds and investments in high yield or non-investment grade debt. Individual investor returns may differ as a result of platform and adviser fees, the actual investment date, cash flows and other transactions.
